“the text is still unwritten”

A limited edition folio of 8 original serigraphs

Printed on 22” x 30” paper: Stonehenge, Canson Bright White and BFK Rives

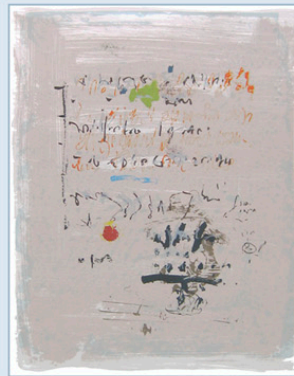

Just like now, the memory of a first reading experience in music shaped my visual expression in text and painting. This series of serigraphs titled “THE TEXT IS STILL UNWRITTEN” explores the openness that marks a visual language beyond words placed in a situation of scores. The movement of the eye is drawing its own dance of waves while we are looking to connect with a dot or a line that connect us within their environment. Each notation has a connotation. Each trace has a memory. Everything has a melody, a music within that is open to improvisations, placing the new (old) in sequence with another knowledge where everything is still in process.
